

The detective introduces himself; says he wants to talk about what happened with appellant's nephew.

The detective says that when men do something wrong, they ask for forgiveness; appellant asks for forgiveness.

Appellant asks if the judge could send him to Mexico: he's thinking about his kids.

He says he'll never come back. He doesn't understand his body, asks for forgiveness, asks it for his kids.

She says he was thinking about killing her; he says he doesn't want to keep fighting with her. He asks her whether she loves him anymore. She says she does not. She asks him to admit what he did to her. He says it was a mistake and asks for her forgiveness. She wants him to apologize, he says he told her mother that he was sorry.

Appellant says he would have liked to face Celeste and ask for forgiveness.

Elena asks if appellant is sorry, he says he is "very, very, very sorry" but doesn't want to tell anyone.

Appellant says he's really sorry for everything, he didn't take care of business right and is stupid.

Mitchell asks what appellant would say to Blakee in fifteen years' time; appellant says she's sorry for "hurting you," and that she "loves you so much." She's sorry for lying and says what she did was stupid.

Appellant also provided a written statement which said that he requested Josefina and Ynez's forgiveness with all his heart.

Appellant's letter said that he had been told she felt bad because he never said sorry to her. He asks her to forgive him, and to tell her mother to forgive him. He writes that it was not his intention to hurt Tamara and never thought it would make her feel bad. He says he loves her very much. He writes to his partner that he loves her and asks her to forgive him. He says he loves all of them with all his heart. There is a smiley face drawn at the end of the letter with a balloon coming from the smiley face saying, "Sweetie, I love you Dull Say." After the signature, he wrote that he hoped they would forgive him.

Appellant asks for forgiveness. He regrets what he has done.
The detective asks appellant if he wants to write that;
appellant says he does not know how to write.

She did not appear at a prior trial: the November 8th letter stated that she missed her father, had forgiven him, and did not want him to go to prison.