

For

Written with the Left Hand

Dropped in the snow, it had come apart
But was still shiny and new. A new camera.
The glass of nourishing whiskey fallen beside it,
Only a little spilled, gray on the snow.
The green chair, ~~some~~ Offered no repose, only a little discontinuity
In space, the mother of distance.
~~Only a note on the floor.~~ The package of time,
But only a sobbing--certain notes.
Breathes, in the transparent but deafening flood.

The parcels pin you to the door,
~~Liking~~ to know how to get out of here, how to breathe.
In another sense it is quiet and beautiful.
Heads in hands, waterfall of simplicity--
Your quaint grave, the highway strewn with tacks.

It is the property to be lifted again
Into the same place. The perishing
Thin ends are alive with rebuttal, bunge
In itself a clever context, and cold end.
To be gotten out of the shadow, a hole
To refuse the square hive
Out of autonomy, clearing
~~The drum. The passage is ice.~~
The steps nothing more than wood splinters.
Loud device to inject
The confusion of stillness, dominate air-fact.

John Ashbery
Jan. 5. 1962

[Signature] Your dentist's name _____
Your dentist's office address _____
Your dentist's telephone number _____
The best place to buy my dental supplies _____
I prefer to buy my dental supplies from _____
I prefer to buy my dental supplies from _____
I prefer to buy my dental supplies from _____
I prefer to buy my dental supplies from _____

سولہ اپنے ایک
امیر کا نام